

RECODE

RECODE – Responding to Complex Diversity in Europe and Canada

-WORKSHOP 5-

MULTIRELIGIOUS SOCIETY
ACCOMODATING NEW RELIGIOUS DIVERSITIES IN POST-SECULAR SETTINGS

11-12 April, 2013

Centre for Human and Social Sciences
(Spanish National Research Council, CSIC)
C/ Albasanz, 26-28
E-28037 Madrid. Spain

Convenors

Francisco Colom González (CSIC, Spain)
Gianni D'Amato (Univ. of Neuchâtel, Switzerland)

The aim of this Section of the RECODE Research Networking Program is to explore the changing relationship between the religious and political spheres in democratic societies. Whereas modernisation has been traditionally conceived as an irrevocable substitution of traditional religious values by secular principles, the fact is that we are facing a profound change in the functional parameters of religion. For centuries, religion was the main instrument of socialization in traditional agrarian societies. Their symbolic universe was shaped by religious references, as were their collective allegiances and their perception of social order and political legitimacy. In modern societies it is the state which exercises, even if in a receding way, this type of cultural hegemony. Religion has historically unbound itself from the normative function of legitimating state authority, but the emergence of new forms of religious diversity continues to demand specific policies from the state. Religion thus has lost its role as a primordial social reference, but it has not given way to completely secularized forms of subjectification. It still counts as a relevant social force that pervades the public, private and personal realms, and it often puts pressure on the role of the state as a neutral public actor. This is what we have defined here as post-secular settings.

In a former seminar (Neuchâtel, October 2011) RECODE reviewed the narratives of secularization and the different types of religious governance in Europe and Canada. In this workshop we will address the social practices, public policies and normative issues involved in the accommodation of the new emerging forms of religious diversity. Special attention will be paid to the management of multiconfessional social spaces. Social spaces are here conceived as physical or symbolic realms where human relations develop, like gathering places, travel routes, and social institutions. In the first panel we will deal with the accommodation of religion in contemporary urban settings, with the configuration of religious itineraries related to pilgrimage or tourism and with the adaptation of medical, penitentiary and funerary practices to multi-religious conditions. In the second panel we will look at the theoretical and practical implications of the claims for legal autonomy made by certain religious groups. In the last panel we will turn to the dilemmas stemming from the participation of organized religious groups in processes of conflict resolution and in the making of public policy.

Program

April 11th, First Session

9:30 - Opening

9:45 – Panel 1 - Out in public: religion and the use of social spaces

Christof Meier (Integrationsförderung, City of Zürich; Switzerland)

Integration Policy in a Multireligious Society

Michael Stausberg (Bergen University, Norway)

Tourism as Location for Religion in Contemporary Europe

Francisco Díez de Velasco (University of La Laguna, Spain):

Multi-faith Spaces: Proposals for a Neutral and Operational Design

11:15 – Coffee-break

11:45 – Panel 1 (continuation)

Ronald George Moore (University College Dublin, Ireland)

Beyond Religion, Science and the Secular: Health Beliefs and Complex Diversity in Northern Ireland

María del Mar Griera (Autonomous University of Barcelona, Spain)

The Accommodation of Religious Diversity in Prisons and Hospitals in Spain

Discussant: Valeriano Esteban (National University of Distance Education, Spain)

14:00 – Lunch at the Centre for Human and Social Sciences

15:30 - Panel 2- One law for all? The legal self-regulation of religious groups

Marie-Claire Foblets (Max Plank Institute of Social Anthropology, Germany)

On the Challenges of Religious Pluralism in a Changing Europe: Main findings of the RELIGARE project (2010-2013)

Bertram Turner (Max Plank Institute of Social Anthropology, Germany)

Translocal faith-based Dispute Management and the Moroccan-Canadian Struggles with Normative Plurality

Francisco Colom González (National Research Council, Spain)

The Arbitration of Faith. Accommodating Legal Pluralism in the Democratic Polity

17:00 – Coffee-break

17:15 – Panel 2 (continuation)

Gianni D'Amato (University of Neuchâtel, Switzerland)

Diversities and the Judiciary

Discussant: José María Sauca (Carlos III University, Spain)

18:30 – End of the First Session

21:00 – Supper in Madrid Downtown

Restaurant El Senador. Plaza de la Marina Española, 2

April 12th, Second Session

9:30 - Panel 3- Public policy for religious co-existence

Veit Bader (University of Amsterdam, Netherlands):

Dilemmas of Institutionalisation and Political Participation of (organised) Religions in Europe

Paul Bramadat (University of Victoria, Canada):

Religion in Canada: Policies, Politics and Predicaments

Avigail Eisenberg (University of Victoria, Canada)

Religion as Ethnicity: from Choice to Identity

11:00 – Coffee-break

11:30 - Panel 3 (continuation)

Discussant: João Manuel Cardoso Rosas (University of Minho, Portugal)

13:00 – Closing of the Seminar

14:30 – Lunch in Madrid Downtown

Restaurant La Penela. C/ Velázquez, 87

With the co-sponsorship of the Fundación Canadá

