

RECODE Summer School 2013

hosted at the University College Dublin, Ireland | June 10th to June 14th 2013

The Challenge of Complex Diversity: Theoretical and Empirical Perspectives from Europe and Canada

Call for participants

Applications are invited from doctoral research students to participate in a week-long summer school organized by the RECODE research networking programme, funded by the European Science Foundation, and hosted by the Humanities Institute, University College Dublin, along with the International Summer Research Institute, from 10th to 14th June 2013. Successful applicants will receive an award covering travel costs and accommodation.

RECODE, an interdisciplinary, comparative research programme, aims to explore to what extent the processes of transnationalisation, migration, religious mobilisation and cultural differentiation entail a new configuration of social conflict in post-industrial societies. The summer school will examine the challenge of complex diversity, through theoretical and empirical perspectives from Europe and Canada.

Invited scholars from all around Europe and Canada will speak to a similarly international group of approximately 40 graduate.

The week long programme will consist of lectures and seminars on the following four thematic areas covered by the RECODE network: (1) Linguistic diversity, (2) De-territorialized diversity, (3) Religious diversity, (4) Solidarity beyond the nation-state.

Applicants must be currently registered with an institution of higher education and/or research in the RECODE membership countries (Austria, Belgium, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Ireland, Netherlands, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland).
